

An evening with

Ai-Jen Poo and the Massachusetts Coalition for Domestic Workers

Wednesday, April 1 - 6:00pm – 9:00pm
1199 SEIU, 150 Mt. Vernon St., Dorchester

Hosted by: The Mass. Coalition for Domestic Workers for the release of Ai-Jen Poo's new book,

The Age of Dignity: Preparing for the Elder Boom in a Changing America,

and to celebrate April 1, 2015—the day that the Massachusetts Domestic Workers Bill of Rights becomes law!

At a time when we desperately need new jobs, new paths to citizenship, and new solutions to persistent crises in care, broad coalitions of people from all walks of life are coming together to push for change.

In her book, Ai-jen Poo points to bold solutions that can help us better care for our loved ones as they age—and create millions of good jobs in the process. Please join us for this conversation and to celebrate the workers and organizations that made our new law possible. This event is part of the Caring Across America tour of 16 cities to build a movement to change how we care in the U.S.

Ai-Jen Poo is the director of the National Domestic Workers Alliance, co-director of Caring Across Generations, recipient of the MacArthur Genius Award, and founder and former lead organizer of Domestic Workers United, an organization of Caribbean, Latina, and African nannies, housekeepers, and elderly caregivers in New York that organizes for “power, respect, and fair labor standards.”

A $25 donation gets you a copy of Ai-Jen's book!
(Proceeds go to the MA Coalition for Domestic Workers.)

For more information or directions: Lydia Edwards, 617-603-1540, Lydia@massdomesticworkers.org